

Welcome Message from the Conference Chair

On behalf of the entire planning team, I want to welcome you to Freedom Summit 2009. We are so thankful you are able to join us for this important glimpse into the world of human trafficking and to explore the point of intersection between our faith in Jesus Christ and the reality of this injustice. It is our hope and prayer that through our time together, you will be challenged to:

See the injustice...

That we would each learn about and get a glimpse of the global slave trade and actually see the faces of those impacted by such evil

Engage your heart...

That we would collectively worship and proclaim Jesus as the source of all freedom and ask Him to help us engage our heartfelt pain for those for whom freedom is not real

Live for freedom...

That each of us would recognize real, tangible ways in which we can exercise our freedom for the freedom of others & consider how God might use our unique gifts to "love our neighbor as ourselves"

In your hands you hold a resource that will serve both as a roadmap for the time we will spend together and as a reference to guide you in your journey into the world of human trafficking. There are many groups doing amazing work around the world with which you can get connected, and many resources available through which you can become more informed about human trafficking. We hope that you will find this handbook to be a helpful tool as we engage this issue and seek to live for freedom.

It has been said, "You haven't really prayed for someone until you've asked God how you might be the answer to that person's prayer." Let's all be open to how God may want to work through our lives to answer another's prayer somewhere in the world.

For The Freedom of All,

Steve Stenstrom

Summaries and Speaker Bios

Breakout Session A – Living Differently: Become a Backyard Abolitionist

Mark Wexler and Allison Trowbridge
Not For Sale Campaign

A recent survey of Americans determined that Christians today do not live differently than non-Christians. With an estimated 27 million people across the globe forced into slavery – 200,000 of them in our own backyard in the U.S. – we've heard the call to action on behalf of the oppressed. We believe it's time to live differently.

Join Not For Sale directors Mark Wexler and Allison Trowbridge to learn how you too can move from awareness to action, and become a Backyard Abolitionist. From investigating and mapping incidents of human trafficking to starting a movement in your own community, this is going to be crash course 101 on what it means to be a "smart activist." Ending modern-day slavery in our lifetime will mean working, buying, playing, and relating differently. Whatever your passion or commitment level, you have something to contribute to the movement. You'll leave equipped and empowered with innovative solutions to confront this global problem, ready to join the movement of modern-day Abolitionists.

Mark Wexler

Mark Wexler is the co-founder and Education Director of the Not For Sale Campaign. Mark started his "job track" with South Africa's Umthombo Street Children. He worked to empower former street kids to take a leading role in structural change, and honed his entrepreneurial skills by growing organizational connections across Europe and Africa. He founded the Not For Sale Campaign with David Batstone and Kique Bazan in 2007, and has strategically developed the Underground Church Network and Not For Sale's presence in Northern California. This summer Mark will be directing a series of Investigator Certification Academies in San Francisco -- equipping individuals to investigate and map modern-day slavery.

Allison Trowbridge

Allison Trowbridge is the National Communications Director of the Not For Sale Campaign. Allison grew up in the Bay Area, and has a background in Communication Studies and European politics – having worked for a British member of the European Parliament in Brussels. At the launch of Not For Sale in 2007, Allison met David Batstone at their alma mater, Westmont College. Inspired to action, she began volunteering with the organization and has never looked back. She has traveled with the campaign to Cambodia and Thailand, and today serves as the National Communications Director from Santa Barbara, CA.

Breakout Session B – Fair Trade: How Our Spending Can Prevent Abuse and Restore Victims of Slavery

Nathan George
Trade As One

Trade As One founder, Nathan George, will talk about how engaging ethically in the everyday activity of purchasing products can provide jobs to victims of trafficking and prevent exposure to extreme poverty and abuse. Come hear practical examples of how to engage as American consumers and to hear stories of lives redeemed from slavery. Hear also how influential thought-leading churches across the country are engaging in fair trade for the first time in innovative and challenging ways.

Nathan George

Convicted of the urgency of practical action on behalf of the global poor and the necessity of engaging the church in America, Nathan and Catherine George founded a fair trade company, Trade as One. Based in Fremont, CA, the company sells products made by victims of trafficking and slavery as part of their holistic restoration. By providing jobs to the poorest of the poor it also prevents the dehumanization that leads to the trade in human beings. Central to Trade as One's vision is that the Church has a crucial part to play. It believes that the church can speak prophetically to the marketplace and lead by example in challenging senseless consumerism on the one hand and it can show how conscious purchasing can be a force for systemic change on the other. Nathan has worked in the software industry for twenty years. Three years ago he moved with his wife and three boys to Santa Cruz, CA, to start Trade as One.

Breakout Session C – Equipping for Abolition

Bethany Hoang
International Justice Mission

In this workshop, learn about the history and structure of International Justice Mission, IJM's casework and methodology and its holistic approach towards transforming public justice systems on behalf of the poor and oppressed. Bethany Hoang will provide ideas and tools for individuals and communities to respond to injustice with concrete action and advocacy

Bethany Hoang

*Bethany Hoang serves as Director of the IJM Institute for International Justice Mission. Bethany received a B.A. in Religion and History from Miami University of Ohio, and she received a Master of Divinity from Princeton Theological Seminary where she graduated with the honor of receiving the distinguished Fellowship in Theology. Bethany joined IJM in 2004. She travels globally, speaking and teaching to thousands on behalf of IJM at churches, conferences and universities. Bethany was recently featured in the book The Relevant Nation: 50 Activist, Artists And Innovators Who Are Changing Their World Through Faith. She was also featured in the September/October edition of Relevant Magazine.*

Breakout Session D – Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children in Northern California

Jenny Williamson
Courage to Be You, Inc.

Minerva Shelton
FBI Special Agent

The sexual exploitation of children is among the most heinous crimes of humanity. Too many in our society believe these children have chosen this life. This is a lie. 85 percent of the children rescued reported being sexually abused at home by individuals they knew and trusted. The average age is 14 years old. These children run to the streets because they believe it is safer than the homes they left behind.

Once on the streets, adults masquerading as “boyfriends”, offering counterfeit love, manipulate, coerce and ultimately force these young, vulnerable children into becoming a commodity. In exchange for sex, children endure frequent beatings, contract diseases and receive the confirmation that no one cares.

The justice system is now viewing these children as victims. While this is a welcome paradigm shift, law enforcement officials are hand cuffed, not by a lack of compassion, but by a severe lack of housing and services for these kids. In Northern California there are no homes for these young victims.

Jenny Williamson

Jenny Williamson is the Founder and President of Courage to Be You, Inc., a Christian non-profit organization that is dedicated to equipping, encouraging and empowering individuals to uncover their identity and discover destiny. Jenny's personal passion is seeing individuals be all they were created to be, in spite of their circumstances. That is why she and Courage to Be You, Inc. are in the process of building a home, Courage House in the Northern California area for young girls rescued from commercial sexual exploitation. Jenny is partnering with local law enforcement and the FBI Human Trafficking task force in the Sacramento area, as well as businesses and the faith-based community. Jenny also actively pursues her passion by designing and speaking at Courage Conferences internationally, making women around the world aware of the plight of these children. She and all her men (sons Austin, Michael-Dean, Ben and their chocolate lab, Jake) currently reside in the Sacramento, California area and attend Adventure Christian Church.

Breakout Session E – Face to Face with Evil... and Responding with Love and Hope

Renee Burkhalter

Director of Development for Agape International Missions

Come face to face with the horrible evil of child sex trafficking in Cambodia as we view a short undercover video exposing how the young girls are sold for sex and review how a country could be so deeply mired in such unspeakable acts. Hear stories of lives that have been transformed as Agape International Missions has responded with the most powerful weapon of all...the unconditional love of Christ and the hope that he brings.

Caution, some of the stories are "R" rated and not for the faint of heart.

Renee Burkhalter

Renee Burkhalter has a love of adventure and a love of people that have lead her to zip lining across canyons, racing horses into Petra, hiking the NaPali coast of Kauai, and joining the battle against the injustice of child sex trafficking in Cambodia. While serving as a pastor on staff of a large church and leading a ministry of 500 people, the executive pastor and his wife, Don and Bridget Brewster, put together a team to establish a long-term aftercare center in Cambodia. The project captured her heart. She volunteered to perform stateside administration, and in 2005 she and her husband visited Cambodia to see first-hand the horrible evil. In 2006, she spent two months in Cambodia assisting the Brewsters in the program development of Agape Restoration Center. In 2007, she returned for three weeks doing research and development for AIM's first community center, Rahab's House. After staring into the beautiful faces of the little girls who were so horribly brutalized she knew she had to do more in the fight for justice for these girls. In January of 2008, she resigned her position at the church, and joined the fight for justice full time as Director of Development for Agape International Missions.

Breakout Session F – The Way Forward: Collaboration and Coalition Building to End Trafficking & Exploitation

Tania DoCarmo
Chab Dai USA

Human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation are a growing global phenomenon, co-conspiring in the further development of modern day slavery. Modern day slavery does not discriminate: men, women and children are regularly sold into exploitative sex and labor in countries across the globe – the United States, Eastern Europe, Southeast Asia... pretty much everywhere, with no immediate end in sight. Though international efforts to fight trafficking have increased in recent years, there remain several gaps and challenges if modern day slavery is to be brought to an end. One such challenge is that cooperation and coordination among grassroots movements, non-profits, and government agencies is currently insufficient.

Join Tania DoCarmo as she discusses trends in trafficking (with a focus on Cambodia and the US), current gaps in collaboration, and presents a collaborative model that has proven successful in Cambodia. Tania will also discuss plans for an upcoming mapping project of services within US borders.

Tania DoCarmo

Tania DoCarmo, Director of Development at Chab Dai USA, co-founded Chab Dai's office in the U.S. after working against sexual exploitation and trafficking for several years in Cambodia. Tania is passionate about seeing an end to human trafficking, sexual exploitation and sexual abuse in the United States, Cambodia and across the globe by advocating for more collaboration, networking and coalition building between non-profits, the faith-based community, grassroots movements, government, and UN agencies. She is equally committed to encouraging more organizations to contribute efforts against trafficking and exploitation by focusing on often-neglected issues such as prevention, demand, boys, child protection, and caring for caregivers. Prior to working with Chab Dai in Cambodia, Tania lived in Brazil for three years, where she met her husband Genilson. Tania and Genilson currently live in Northern California and have plans to move back to Cambodia in 2010. In her spare time, Tania enjoys reading, travel, and art.

Breakout Session G – Fighting Human Trafficking in Thailand and Burma

April Riggins

Life Impact International

This session will give an overview of child trafficking, slavery and exploitation in Thailand and Burma, and take a close-up look at the harsh realities facing so many young children in these nations. The session will identify the scope of the problem and introduce the works of Life Impact Int'l. April will discuss Life Impact International's strategies of prevention, rescue, and healing that are used to address and combat these issues, and will share several stories of children whose lives and futures have been forever changed as a result. The session will end by discussing specific ways that others can get involved with Life Impact Int'l to increase awareness and take action against human trafficking.

April Riggins

April Riggins has been serving with Lana Vasquez and the Life Impact Int'l team in Thailand for over six years, helping them in the fight against child trafficking and the exploitation of children. Like the vision of Life Impact Int'l, April's heart is to reach out to women and children who are or have been victims of child slavery, prostitution, abandonment, extreme poverty or abuse - and especially those whom others have overlooked or not yet reached. April obtained her degree in Organizational Leadership from Bethel University in Minnesota, and has many years of experience in childcare and a background in child development. Over the past six years, April has travelled extensively with Life Impact Int'l finding the children that need help in different countries in Asia, and has been a part of the development of a team that is working to give these children a new life that would not have been possible otherwise.

Breakout Session H – How to be an Abolitionist as a College Student

Danielle Hughes

Student at University of San Francisco

As a student at the University of San Francisco, Danielle took part in Dave Batstone's yearlong class focused on the issue of Human Trafficking and Modern Slavery. In this class, she not only learned about what human trafficking is and why it exists, but also what she could do as a student to help stop the issue in her own backyard. She learned that slavery exists everywhere, even in San Francisco, and that it is a multilayered issue. Danielle will be talking about her experience as a student abolitionist and informing others on how it can be accomplished.

Danielle Hughes

Danielle Hughes is currently a Psychology student at the University of San Francisco. She has been passionate about abolishing slavery ever since she learned that it still exists and who is being affected. She has always been interested in social justice issues, and sees this as an issue we can actually do something about. After the year-long course, she traveled with her class to Thailand to see how deeply rooted the issue is there, as well, and what is being done to help stop and prevent human trafficking abroad. Danielle is still passionate in the fight against modern slavery, and wants to continue to spread awareness and help prevent it.

Breakout Session I – Freedom Has a Face

Johnbull & Stacy Omorefe
City of Refuge Ministries

City of Refuge Ministries, also known as Not For Sale Team Ghana, is working to fight human trafficking along the shores of Lake Volta, the largest man made lake in the world. The children of Ghana are at great risk of being sold into the fishing industry by their parents due to poverty. This has become a practice that is culturally acceptable and an issue too large for the government of Ghana to tackle. Not For Sale Team Ghana is working to rescue as many children from Lake Volta as possible as well as prevent the child from being sold. Research, prevention and restoration all play a large part of what we are doing to give Freedom a Face.

Johnbull & Stacy Omorefe

In 2006 Johnbull and Stacy Omorefe founded City Of Refuge Ministries to reach out to the orphaned and abandoned children of Ghana, West Africa. In December 2007 they traveled to Ghana to seek out a situation that they had heard about earlier in the year. They found themselves in the Volta Region of Ghana in a village called Kete Krachi. Kete Krachi is the major hub for the fishermen who live along Lake Volta, in the Volta Region. It is also a major hub for child trafficking in this region. In October 2008 the Freedom Center was established in Tema, Ghana, to be a home for the children rescued from slavery along the shores of Lake

Volta. There have since been 16 children rescued from slavery, ranging in ages between 3-12. In June 2009 NFS Team Ghana will be going back to Kete-Krachi and rescuing an additional 7 children from Lake Volta. After this rescue the Freedom Center will be at capacity.

Breakout Session J – Project Gulu: Bringing Healing to a City

Eugene Stutzman
Watoto

Project Gulu is a ministry of Watoto in Uganda, East Africa. The program is designed to restore hope and dignity to orphans and widows in Northern Uganda whose lives have been shattered by the LRA. Learn how the lives of former child soldiers are being transformed and how an entire city is being made liveable again.

Eugene Stutzman

Formerly a general contractor, Eugene Stutzman sold his business at the end of 2005 and, along with his wife Glenda, moved to Uganda where they served as team leaders for the world renowned Watoto Children's Choir for 2 years. In June of 2008 Eugene was called back to the US to serve as Executive Director for Watoto USA. Eugene and Glenda live in Tampa, FL and have no children of their own but have 1,700 Ugandan children that they dearly love.

Breakout Session K – Child Labor at its Worst: The Child Soldiers of Southeast Asia

Marcus Young
Project AK-47

The International Labour Organization (ILO) has declared child soldiering as the single most destructive form of labor exploitation in the world. With the advent of lightweight modern weapons like the AK-47, the rogue militaries of the world have been able to make use of more than 300,000 children as soldiers. Roughly 1/3 of these children "live" in Southeast Asia. There is virtually no hope for the majority of these children...unless we are tough enough to take action. This breakout session will examine strategic ways to build rescue and care programs for child soldiers in Asia and will challenge us to pursue life from God's perspective, looking for the unlikely places where His Kingdom is breaking out.

Marcus Young

Marcus Young is a 4th-generation missionary and the Founder & CEO of Project AK-47. His family was at the forefront of two historical church movements in Southeast Asia in the early 1900s. With this powerful family history and a generational calling on his own life, Marcus began mission work as a young man. For the past 15 years, Marcus and his wife Alyxius have found creative ways to bless politically unsettled regions in Asia. They have successfully worked in many expressions of mission, but their passion has been children at risk. In their pioneering work with child soldiers, they have rescued many children from soldiering and are now giving them care and hope. Marcus is keenly perceptive and speaks with a penetrating voice on the issues of social justice as they relate to the church in our day.

Breakout Session L – Human Trafficking: The Local Response

Sgt. John Vanek

SJPD Human Trafficking Task Force

The San Jose Police Department Human Trafficking Task Force was created in 2005 in partnership with the United States Department of Justice / Bureau of Justice Assistance. The Task Force is comprised of local and federal agencies, and non-governmental organizations. The Task Force is responsible for investigating human trafficking, training professionals who may come into contact with human trafficking victims, and conducting public outreach to raise awareness of human trafficking in Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey counties. This breakout will cover federal and state human trafficking laws, forms of trafficking from a global to local perspective, and the capabilities of the HTTF.

Sergeant John Vanek

Sergeant John Vanek is currently assigned to the San Jose Police Department's Vice Unit, where he manages the United States Department of Justice / Bureau of Justice Assistance-funded Human Trafficking Task Force. The Task Force is responsible for human trafficking investigations, public outreach, and training professionals who may come into contact with human trafficking victims. To date, the Task Force has trained over 3,500 persons involved or interested in anti-human trafficking efforts. Over the course of his 22-year career, Sergeant Vanek's assignments have included Field Operations, Special Operations, Training, and Sexual Assault Investigations. In addition to his Vice and Task Force duties, Sergeant Vanek is also a Bomb Technician. He received his BA Degree in International Relations from San Francisco State University in 1983.

Breakout Session M – Combating Human Trafficking in South Asia

Katy Anderson
Sisters in Service

In South Asia demand for child sex workers is high. In this break-out session, you will hear some of the harsh realities of the conditions in this region, think through how you would respond as a trafficker, a parent, and a potential trafficking victim, see a real-life story of a young girl who has been trafficked and rescued, hear the most effective interventions to combat trafficking in South Asia, and learn how you can help rescue and restore trafficking victims in South Asia.

Katy Anderson

Katy Anderson serves as knowledge management coordinator with Sisters in Service (SIS). SIS works with local initiatives in countries from West Africa to East Asia addressing female abuse and exploitation, such as child marriage, physical abuse, disposable young mothers, and human trafficking. Katy received her Master of Theology in Women's Ministry from Dallas Theological Seminary. For four years she served in various capacities on staff at a large church in the Dallas area, including Women's Ministry Coordinator and Growth Resources Coordinator. Katy joined Sisters in Service in 2007, where she works with the SIS staff and local partners to bring effective transformation on the local level. Through her travels in India and Indonesia, Katy has experienced first hand the desperate suffering of women and girls and the saving hope of transformed lives. She has traveled to India to put on a leadership retreat for local partners in India and Indonesia and spoken at several retreats and seminaries.

Breakout Session N – Selling Yourself, Selling Your Children: Why?

James Keim
Southeast Asia Children's Project

Diep Vuong
Pacific Links Foundation

This presentation explores the range of coercion involved in people who are deceived into sex work, who are coerced into sex work by poverty or addiction, who enter sex work for material gains, or who sell their children. We then will discuss how prevention programs seek to address these causes and contexts.

James Keim

James Keim, MSW, is coauthor of the book, The Violence of Men and has contributed chapters to eight other books. He is Co-Founder and Director of the Southeast Asia Children's Project, an organization that facilitates the training of therapists who treat victims of human trafficking in Vietnam, Cambodia, and Thailand. He is also one of the organizers of the Humans for Sale photography exhibit. He lives in the Bay Area.

Diep Vuong

Diep N. Vuong co-founded and currently serves as President of Pacific Links Foundation, a nonprofit based in the Bay Area. Agape International Missions

Cambodia is a country decimated by Pol Pot and the Khmer Rouge in the late 1970's. Mass genocide of the educated, government and military leaders, religious leaders and influential people resulted in what has become known as the Killing Fields of Cambodia, and the country still suffers from this reign of terror today. The severe corruption in government and the abject poverty in which much of the country live fuel the child sex trafficking industry. In response to this egregious problem, Agape International Missions uses the weapon of Christ's unconditional love to bring hope to rescued victims, and prevent sex trafficking by equipping and mobilizing the church for action and establishing community centers in sex trafficking hot spots.

Agape Restoration Center provides holistic, long-term aftercare for rescued girls through a loving and nurturing Cambodian staff. True transformation is taking place in the lives of the girls entrusted to our care. Rahab's House and The Lord's Gym reach into the heart of a very dark village, Svay Pak, where young girls are trafficked throughout Cambodia, with the love of Christ. The Cambodian Church is being equipped and mobilized to take action. A group of brave pastors are taking bold action by working undercover.

Ways to get involved:

Pray – Join the Agape International Missions' email prayer team where prayer agendas are sent out each month

Financial Support – The cost for our prevention efforts and long-term aftercare are not cheap. IJM anticipates many rescues this year in Cambodia and God has called us to expand so we can provide more care

Missions Trip – Consider short-term trips for medical relief and humanitarian aid. (You provide medicines or funds to purchase them, funds for rice and mosquito net distribution.)

Breaking Free

Based in St. Paul, Minnesota, Breaking Free is a non-profit organization that provides direct services to victims of human trafficking/prostitution. Breaking Free also provides community education to promote the recognition of this injustice as systematic violence against women and girls and works to change attitudes that perpetuate those views. This Afro-centric agency works with diverse populations of prostituted females and understands that exploitation deprives women and girls of their fundamental human rights to justice and the opportunity to live their lives free from violence and abuse. Breaking Free recognizes that trafficked women and girls encounter considerable barriers that impede their attempts to reach their full potential and strives to foster the self-esteem and encouragement needed to help them re-build their lives. Some of the various programs offered through the organization include Permanent and Transitional Housing, the Offender's Program (John School), women's weekly support groups, a Youth Program and Health Outreach.

City of Refuge Ministries

City of Refuge Ministries was founded in 2006 to be a help to the people of Ghana, West Africa. In December 2007, Johnbull and Stacy Omorefe, founders of City of Refuge Ministries, traveled to Kete Krachi, Ghana where they discovered the issue of human trafficking. Both boys and girls are sold to the fishermen for labor, working as many as 14 hours a day. The boys work fixing nets and fishing while the girls main duties are to help the wives with domestic chores. Many of the young girls talk about being the "master's wife" and several of these girls are pregnant by the age of 16. They found that negotiating the freedom of the children wasn't so much an issue as to where the children would live after they were rescued. In October 2008 the Freedom Center was opened to give a safe home to the children rescued out of slavery. Since that time 16 children have been rescued from the shores of Lake Volta with an additional seven children to be rescued in June 2009. In March 2009 20 acres of land was given to the City of Refuge Ministries. This land will be developed into a children's village that will consist of several safe homes, staff housing, schools (primary, secondary and vocational), a clinic, farm and poultry. The building projects for this development will begin in June 2009.

The goal is to offer local shelter and aftercare for victims of slavery and human trafficking across the United States. Aftercare will include a safe and honoring living space, food and clothing, medical assistance, mental health care, life skills and job training, legal assistance and coaching to transition to independence. Global Family Village abandoned and displaced children in Nepal, one of the poorest nations in the world. The GFV Model undercuts the conditions in which exploitation has commonly flourished – by creating alternatives. Without accountable child-centered care, the disenfranchised children of Nepal have traditionally been most vulnerable to every form of exploitation.

Global Family Village creates community-based, family-centered models for the care of orphaned,

Global Family Village stops trafficking from gaining a foothold among these vulnerable populations by creating a nurturing community comprised of widows and orphans grouped into families and integrated into an existing community where these new orphan families will be valued and absorbed, and no longer be vulnerable to human exploitation and trafficking. They also provide women and orphanages with para-professional caregiver training to support and empower them, and provide microeconomic opportunity for individual women as well as the orphanage management in order to supplant the lure of orphan sales.

Ways to get involved:

Donate your Time - Volunteer Opportunities, provide support in Nepal Office, Nepal service program sites, or in the GFV San Francisco Headquarters

Donate your Money – Contribute general operating funds, ear-marked specific program funds, legacy contributions

Donate your Expertise – Apply academic studies with fieldwork experience in Nepal, explore graduate school internship opportunities

Share life experience in variety of disciplines: computer programming, education, psychology, child development, ESL, adult literacy, construction, microeconomics, home economics, medical, dental, etc.

Hagar International

Hagar International is committed to the recovery and empowerment of women and children who are victims of human rights abuses, particularly human trafficking, sexual exploitation, and domestic violence. Established in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, in 1994, the organization is guided by the biblical story of Hagar (Genesis 21: 8 – 21). Just as God came to Hagar as she was huddled in fear and trepidation in the desert, Hagar International responds to women and children who have been cast out, rejected, and without hope. They serve victims of sex trafficking: women who have been forced into prostitution and little girls who have been sold into the brothels of Phnom Penh. In addition, Hagar serves boys who have been trafficked for labor and forced begging.

Hagar's focus is on long-term programs that provide social rehabilitation and economic empowerment. With children, Hagar provides trauma counseling, loving residential care, and 'catch-up' education for those who have never attended school. The women's program provides counseling, literacy education, and vocational training. Then, most women experience their first formal work experience at one of three Hagar businesses, each of which has grown up from a small cottage industry to a full-scale commercial operation. These include a catering business, a soy milk producer, and a fair-trade manufacturer of women's handbags. Together, the businesses employ approximately 300 people. In 2008, Hagar began operations in Afghanistan, and expansions into Vietnam, Laos, and India will follow in 2009. Survivors of sex trafficking will be the key beneficiaries in the new locales.

Ways to get involved:

Become a key staff member at an overseas location. Opportunities can be viewed at www.hagarinternational.org, 'about us', then 'employment'

Volunteers with marketing expertise or web development skills can serve Hagar USA (US-based support office) (usa@hagarinternational.org)

International Justice Mission

International Justice Mission is a human rights agency that secures justice for victims of slavery, sexual exploitation and other forms of violent oppression. IJM's justice professionals work in their communities in 12 countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America to secure tangible and sustainable protection of national laws through local court systems. IJM investigators, lawyers and social workers intervene in individual cases of abuse in partnership with state and local authorities to ensure proper support for the victim and appropriate action against the perpetrator. Life Impact International Life Impact International combats the harsh realities of child trafficking, slavery and exploitation in Thailand with the hope of future prevention, rescue and healing. The first phase of prevention involved starting a Home for children at risk of being sold or trafficked as a result of extreme poverty and lack of education in the hill tribe villages of Thailand. This home started with 52 children, many of whom are now adults and are in university or Bible schools, married, in full-time ministry or working.

Currently we have a Safe Home in Thailand that houses 19 children who have been rescued out of prostitution, child slavery, abuse, abandonment and extreme poverty. We also have a cyclone orphanage inside Burma with over 40 children who were left without homes or families and prey for the traffickers after Cyclone Nargis hit in May 2008. Both of our homes provide a safe and loving environment where they can be healed and restored and put the memories of war, exploitation and abuse behind them. They can enter into a new life with God where they are once again free to play, dream and become all that He has created them to be!

In addition to our Homes, we also target the root of the problem through prevention programs, which include vocational training, family support and community development projects.

Ways to get involved:

Pray – For the Life Impact International ministry as well as the children and the people it reaches

Support – Give financially to support our many programs, purchase much-needed items for our orphanages or special project, initiate corporate sponsorship

Go – Come to Thailand and assist in the vocational training programs, teaching things such as sewing, welding, cooking and speaking English. Construction, counseling, child development, medical, media. Other professional services are always greatly needed as well

Bringing Awareness – Hold fundraisers or special events in your community, tell your friends, family, business or organizations about the problem and situation in Thailand and Burma

Project AK-47

Child Soldiering is one of the cruelest forms of human trafficking in existence. According to The Asian Wall Street Journal, one third of the 300,000 child soldiers in the world live in Southeast Asia. Boys and girls as young as 4 years old are forced into local ethnic armies where they are trained as soldiers for guerrilla warfare. Project AK-47 exists to rescue these children. They take child soldiers out of hopeless situations and care for them in the long term. They labor in restricted access regions of Southeast Asia, where children are truly at risk, so we do not publish specific locations or the identities of these children in order to protect them. They train these children to become leaders in their society. They give them shelter, food, clothing, education, spiritual care and love. They do not extract these children from their home countries because they believe that they will be the ones who effect lasting change there.

Project AK-47 has open doors to expand and build new rescue projects but are in need of more committed partners in order to take advantage of these opportunities. They are also developing their global volunteer corps and Artist Alliance and could use some powerful advocates like you.

Ways to get involved:

$7 a month (or any multiple thereof) helps us care for the children we have already rescued and are protecting, and it allows us to rescue even more child soldiers

Join the volunteer corps or internship program (ask for more info)

Stop Child Trafficking Now (SCTNow)

SCTNow believes in targeting the source of child trafficking: predators who drive the sex industry everywhere in the world, including your own local community. They believe that for every child rescued another takes his or her place. Not until we stop the predators will we rid the world of trafficking. SCTNow's goal is to put predators behind bars and end the demand by funding Special Operative Teams. These teams possess skills beyond the average military or law enforcement individual—skills that enable them to achieve their goals in foreign lands independently, without support of US law enforcement resources. The efforts of a single operative team will do more to save children than millions of dollars put toward rescuing victims!

Ways to get involved:

Participate in the inaugural WALK to Stop Child Trafficking Now! on September 26-27, 2009

Sign up to walk for the Palo Alto Community at www.sctnow.org

*Register as a Team Captain and gather a team of individuals who would each raise the minimum of $100 to participate in the walk. As a team captain, you will have the goal of having at least 6 qualified members on your team. Teams that raise $5,000 or more will be awarded a LCD TV and as the Team Captain, you will get to decide who gets the prize
Volunteer to help organize the walk by helping with one of several roles such as Public Relations/Advertising Manager, Corporate Relations Manager or Event Coordinator. Send an email to PaloAlto@SCTNow.org if you have any questions*

SHE Thailand

Started in 2006, SHE (Self Help and Empowerment) is a Christian charity committed to helping women and children at risk in Thailand, many of whom are trapped in the commercial sex trade. SHE is dedicated to providing employment, vocational training and counseling for women who want to help themselves out of this industry. All proceeds go directly to helping them find employment, community, friendship, restoration, and above all restoration of their own value.

Mark and Sharon Biddell are the co-founders of SHE. They and their four children, ranging from the ages of 6-16 (Jake, Luke, Joshua, and Sophie), moved from the UK to Thailand in May of 2006. They spend most nights building relationships with women working in the hundreds of bars in Phuket, Thailand. Once a relationship is established after a few visits, Mark & Sharon share the vision of SHE with the women and let them know that there is a way out: they can have a salaried job making jewelry with SHE if they are interested. The only condition of employment is that they must quit their job at the bar completely.

Ways to get involved:

Pray – for the protection of all of the SHE ministries, for the girls still trapped in slavery and those in the SHE program, for the projects around Phuket

Financial support – This is possible by making a donation or purchasing merchandise direct on the web site (<http://www.shethailand.org/Help.php>)

Sisters in Service

Sisters In Service (SIS) works with local initiatives in countries from West Africa to East Asia

addressing female abuse and exploitation, such as temporary wives, sex trafficking, disposable young mothers, and physical abuse. SIS's mission is to mobilize and equip God's people to empower women and children against poverty, disease, exploitation and spiritual darkness in the least Christian regions of the world including China, India, Indonesia, Mali, Sudan, Iraq, and Nepal. Our local partner program in Nepal uses a multi-pronged approach to combat human trafficking. Prevention activities include radio ads and street dramas, alerting high-risk communities of sex traffickers' schemes. At-risk girls receive education in reproductive health and STDs basic educational instruction, often alongside income-generating programs that teach the girls job skills, enabling them to so that they can provide for themselves and reduce their risk of falling prey to traffickers. Finally, rescued girls who can't return home, or who need counseling are sent to the rehabilitation home run by local Christians. Women and girls are given the opportunity to complete their education, receive training in health, hygiene and income generating opportunities and are prepared for reintegration into a community.

Our partner's staff has earned the trust of the border police who allow them to pull aside and question any suspicious-looking girls. As a result, in 2009, SIS expects 300 girls to be rescued from the hands of deceivers, and some perpetrators will get arrested. Our 22 local initiatives in 10 countries changed the lives of over 37,000 women and children last year through education, healthcare, economic opportunities and spiritual nurture. Starfish Project

Starfish Project, founded in 2005, is an organization that aims to help rescue exploited and trafficked women in Asia. It mainly operates as a transitional safe house for women who have chosen to leave the sex trade and are seeking alternative employment options. The safe house is run by several house moms who are dedicated to serving daily needs of the women. In addition to providing shelter, the project aims to provide medical check-ups, training, and group and individual counseling. In 2007, Starfish Project opened a jewelry business to provide an alternative source of income for the women in the shelter. By participating in various aspects of jewelry making and distribution, the women earn a salary that keeps them off the street and in wholesome, life-giving relationships. We are currently in the process of securing our second safe house to be able to meet the demands that we are facing.

Ways to get involved:

Interactive Exhibits

Stories of Slavery

This display is a collection of about 100 true stories of human trafficking victims around the world. We hope to educate people through displaying the wide variety of why and how people are trafficked, where they are trafficked, how traffickers deceive people, etc. A lot of these particular stories are only known because the victims were rescued and able to tell their story. How many people still don't have a voice?? We have much work to do!!

Justice Do It

This booth will be a dreaming, brainstorming, ideas table. Come share some of the ways that you think you are uniquely gifted and passionate about fighting human trafficking. What are next steps that you want to take after this conference? We will compile everyone's ideas and post them on our website: www.freedom-summit.org after the Freedom Summit. If someone has a similar idea, you can collaborate!

Deceived into Slavery

You will be led into the life of Elizabeth, who was deceived and sold into sex slavery in Burma. You will be taken into a mock two room depiction of what Elizabeth thought she was getting (a job at a restaurant with hopes of going to school) and what she actually got (sold into a brothel and forced to have sex with 10-20 men every day!) There is no way that this display can even come close to fully capturing the horrors of living in this type of bondage for months and years.

Buying Free

Do you know what is behind the products you consume every day? Unfortunately we eat, drink, wear, and buy products every day which use slavery at some point in the production chain. How can we become responsible consumers? The first step is education, but we also hope to provide you with a starting list of fair trade products, where you can buy some of them in the local area, and where to begin your own research on the slavery behind products we consume daily. Check out the Trade as One store to buy fair trade products right now!

Slavery Map

This display is a glance at trafficking in the Bay Area. This map is a blown up version of the map found on slaverymap.org, indicating some of the known stories and locations of trafficking here in our own backyard!

Monologue Theater

Listen to dramatic readings from the point of view of trafficking victims. There will be several showings on Saturday between 11am and 2pm right across the hall from the Global Village. Come watch people share "their stories"!

Photography Exhibits

Images of Human Trafficking

The Office To Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons assigned a U.S. photographer, Kay Chernush, to take these photos in India, Thailand, Italy, and Hong Kong in 2005. The photographs in this gallery were taken to illustrate the State Department's annual report on "Trafficking in Persons," required under the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000. This report serves as the primary diplomatic tool through which the U.S. Government encourages other countries to help fight forced labor, sexual exploitation, and modern-day slavery.

Faces of Freedom

The beauty of a hand woven carpet is inextricably linked to the people who make it. Yet today approximately 300,000 children weave the rugs that adorn North American and European homes. RugMark offers hope to these children. For over a decade RugMark's child-labor-free certification has made a meaningful difference in South Asian carpet weaving communities while transforming the industry that impacts them.

Faces of Freedom offers a look into the heart of that transformation. This photo exhibition, part of RugMark's Most Beautiful Rug Campaign to end child labor, takes you behind the looms and inside the carpet factories of South Asia. The images were captured by photo documentarian, filmmaker and human rights educator U. Roberto Romano.

These photographs will connect you to the positive, real-life difference made by RugMark and the companies that participate in its independent certification program. RugMark Foundation USA and its exhibition co-sponsor, the U.S. Fund for UNICEF, hope that Faces of Freedom inspires you to take action.

Humans For Sale

The Humans For Sale Exhibition seeks to put a human face on a human trade. Modern human trafficking is, more than any other region of the world, a Southeast Asian story. It is a tale too unspeakably horrible for most people to imagine. It is a story that must be told with photographs and words. The Green Rice Gallery, in an effort to help educate the public about this problem, has organized a traveling exhibit that integrates stories, writings and photographs by Mickey Choothesa, Mikel Flamm, Neal Newfield, Kim Cuc Ngo, Rev. Nguyen Van Hung, Peter, A. Christopher Earle, James Keim and others who have documented trafficking in this region of the world. The photographers are associated with The Southeast Asia Children's Project, Vietnamese Migrant Workers & Brides Office in Taiwan, Catalyst Foundation and other organizations. Most photographs are from Vietnam, Thailand, Cambodia, and Taiwan.

Slavery

The term "Human Trafficking" disguises itself as another form or identity to define "Slavery". Essentially the two terms are exact in definition and meaning. Although in today's modern world, we somehow adopted into commonly using the term "Human Trafficking"; slavery is slavery regardless. "History doesn't repeat itself, but it does rhyme." - Mark Twain.

In the series of posters I executed to communicate different emotions and aspects of human-trafficking. Some of which entail: sex-trafficking, child-soldiers, labor, revenue, and abuse.

Stores

Trade As One Store

At the Trade As One store, you can vote with your dollars to advocate for the enslaved, impoverished, and marginalized of our world by purchasing products that keep them employed, breaking the cycle of poverty that puts them at risk of becoming slaves in the first place.

Book Store

Pick up a couple of books or movies at our Book Store (located in the main lobby) to either further your own education or to share with someone else who will be moved to action by the issues. Reference our book and film lists at the end of this handbook for information on many of the books and films offered.

Christians, Justice and the Antislavery Movement

Title: Good News About Injustice

Author: Gary Haugen

Summary: Gary Haugen, the Founder and President of International Justice Mission, a Christian human rights organization, shares his journey in becoming an advocate for the oppressed. He tells the story of his experience in Rwanda, where he encountered suffering as a reality by personally witnessing the effects of state-sponsored violence. Using Biblical passages, Haugen outlines the character of God as a God of hope, compassion, mercy and justice. Haugen encourages Christians to actively pursue justice and to defend the oppressed with individual skills and gifts, and he uses the stories of three Christians as examples of the potential for change through compassion, courage and action.

Title: Just Courage

Author: Gary Haugen

Title: Bury the Chains: The British Struggle to Abolish Slavery

Author: Adam Hochschild

Summary: Award-winning author Adam Hochschild writes a historical account of human rights activism in the 18th century. Over two hundred years ago in England, a group of twelve men decided their mission was to end human slavery; Hochschild particularly focuses on two men, John Newton, a former slave-ship captain who later became a Christian and wrote the hymn Amazing Grace, and Thomas Clarkson, an abolitionist campaigner and scholar. With persistent grass-roots organization, these men successfully organized a boycott against sugar, a slave-produced good to create a social movement against slavery. Their long-term commitment through organizing public citizens, forming committees and lobbying Parliament eventually led to the abolition of slavery in Britain in the 1933. This book documents the potential for mass social change that can conquer over the vast interests of business and politics.

Author: Eric Metaxas

Summary: Metaxas writes a biographical account of William Wilberforce and the abolitionist movement in Britain during the 18th and 19th centuries. A New York Times bestseller, this book accompanies the 2007 movie Amazing Grace.

Background Information on Human Trafficking and Modern Day Slavery

Title: A Crime so Monstrous: Face-to-Face with Modern Day Slavery

Author: E. Benjamin Skinner

Summary: Skinner, a journalist, writes about his encounters with human slavery around the world. He describes child slavery in Haiti, sex trafficking in Europe and Asia, as well as slavery in the United States suburbs. Skinner focuses on individual narratives and then explain how these personal stories represent the greater trends and general patterns of victims. Skinner documents the conditions of the countries where he travels, the process of infiltrating slave rings by posing as a "john" or potential customer, and the gross truth that is the relative ease of acquiring human life with a single purchase. He also discusses the politics involved in human slavery, from the role of complicit law enforcement officers to the difficulty in getting the United States government to acknowledge that modern day slavery is a global problem for which we are responsible to fight. Skinner highlights the work of Ambassador John Miller, who is featured in Call and Response, a documentary on human trafficking, as Ambassador Miller's efforts, especially his implementation of annual reports to hold nations accountable for the prevalence of human trafficking and exploitation within their own borders.

Title: Disposable People: New Slavery in the Global Economy

Author: Kevin Bales

Summary: Although slavery is now illegal, slavery is more common than every. As a trained political scientist, Bales adopts an economic and moral approach in his book by asserting that slavery is not a historical issue but a reality that demands humanitarian attention. Bales links the growth of slavery to a global economy dependent on exploited labor. Under the current economic structure, human lives are considered as high-supply, expendable, low-cost units of production that generate high profits. Bales describes the conditions of forced workers in India, Pakistan, Brazil and Thailand while explaining how cultural, social and economic values promote slavery. Bales' book was the basis for an Emmy and Peabody award winning documentary The Carpet Slaves: Stolen Children of India, and all proceeds of this book are donated to antislavery projects. Bales serves as the President for Free the Slaves, an antislavery organization.

Title: Ending Slavery: How We Free Today's Slaves

Author: Kevin Bales

Summary: Bales highlights the stories and conditions of child slaves, particularly children in Africa who are forced to harvest cocoa beans to produce chocolate and children in India who are forced into the fabric and weaving industries. Bales discusses a variety of solutions to end global human exploitation ranging from tactics of public shame to political pressure and police raids. Bales supplements his writing with stories from on the ground activists and provides a guide of how-to steps for a functional plan to stop modern day slavery.

Title: Not for Sale: The Return of the Global Slave Trade and How We Can Fight It

Author: David Batstone

Summary: David Batstone, an award-winning journalist as well as the Founder and Director of the Not For Sale Campaign, documents his experience in confronting modern day slavery after a police raid on a trafficking ring in his own neighborhood. Batstone addresses the different kinds of global exploitation through the personal narratives of both victims and people taking heroic action. He documents cases of sex slavery in Cambodia, Thailand, Peru and Europe, forced labor in South Asia, child soldiers in Uganda and domestic trafficking within the United States. He outlines various opportunities for all citizens to take action in fighting slavery locally and around the world. Batstone also highlights the efforts of antislavery and anti-trafficking organizations dedicated to rescuing victims, spreading public awareness, enforcing policy and changing economic practices.

Subject: Slavery in the United States

Title: The Slave Next Door

Author: Kevin Bales and Ron Soodalter

Summary: This book is specific to slavery in the United States and document forced domestic servitude and forced child labor at factories as well as in service industries. The authors emphasize that slavery affects all of society and is present even in unexpected locations, such as suburban areas in the United States. This book offers a broad range of narratives from law enforcement officers, after-care service providers, traffickers and victimized slaves.

Title: Nobodies: Modern American Slave Labor and the Dark Side of the New Global Economy

Author: John Bowe

Summary: Bowe focuses on exploitation within the United States, specifically documenting the conditions of farm laborers as well as workers in the fabric and steel industries. Workers are held captive by actual violence or the threat of violence; although their slave holders do not legally own them, exploited laborers are physically and psychologically forced to stay. Bowe also emphasizes the role of major corporations in fueling the demand for forced labor in order to produce cheap goods and services. As a result, Bowe suggests that all consumers contribute to human exploitation and advocates for personal action, such as paying laborers a living wage. Bowe predicts that without personal action and the enforcement of labor laws by government agencies, drastic inequalities will emerge and will destroy a fundamental sense of value for humanity.

Title: The War on Human Trafficking

Author: Anthony DeStefano

Summary: DeStefano is an attorney and a reporter who traces the political history of anti-trafficking legislation in the United States. DeStefano argues that human trafficking and exploitation is not about sensationalized debates regarding prostitution; rather, human trafficking is a human rights violation that includes victims of sexual slavery in addition to other types of forced labor, such as child slavery and exploitative industries such as chocolate and fabrics. In this way, he urges concerned citizens to move beyond simply relying on media coverage that documents personal narratives to instead critically examine the efforts of policy makers and public officials in actually fulfilling the legal guarantees to fight human trafficking through the protection of victims and the prosecution of perpetrators. His perspective evaluates the action and progress of the federal government through the creation and implementation of federal documents. DeStefano specifically focuses on the policy trajectory leading up to the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 and the subsequent legislation that nominally continues to support and expand this bill. He explains the context for policy efforts by describing the backlash that can occur when legislation is interpreted as part of a larger political agenda as well as the hindrance to policy implementation with limited resources, especially when other issues are considered to be a higher priority or of a more pressing interest. Finally, DeStefano reveals some of the difficulties in enforcing the policy aims due to technicalities, such as the inability to produce strong cases against traffickers due to the specific criteria of evidence.

Title: Not My Life

Summary: Not My Life is a feature-length documentary film about global human trafficking, a horrifying modern-day phenomenon that affects millions of children, women, and men in every part of the world. Specific aspects of this emerging issue—especially female sexual trafficking—are to some degree being addressed in books, news stories, television reports, and fiction and non-fiction films. To date, however, there is no single communication tool that effectively depicts the problem as a whole for a mass audience. The rationale for Not My Life is that until such a tool is created and widely used, the general public will remain uninformed and indifferent, and a problem that is already very bad will only get worse.

Like Worldwide Documentaries' 2003 release, A Closer Walk, the ultimate intent of Not My Life is to provide insight into 'the way the world is'. Modern-day slavery thrives along transnational fault lines of extreme poverty, social injustice, political unrest, and acts of violence and deprivation that are morally indefensible and dangerous in the extreme. Insofar as it depicts a world in which millions of human beings have become disposable commodities, Not My Life is, first and foremost, a cautionary tale: human traffickers, and the corrupt or complacent systems in which they operate, undermine virtually every aspect of our collective well-being, including our security, health, economic stability, and sustainability as a global community.

Filming for Not My Life is taking place in North and South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. Pre-production began in the Fall of 2005 and production has been underway since early 2007. The film is targeted for completion at the end of 2008.

In their own words, we hear how the day traffickers took each of them from their rural villages and sold them into sexual servitude in the brothels of India. The girls describe it as, "the day my god died." The film documents the fact that these stories are not isolated or haphazard. The industry has formed pipelines in which every person in the chain profits except for the girls that pay the price with their lives. This heart-wrenching documentary offers a memorable portrayal of the corruption and evil behind the curtain of India's sex industry, providing us with a brief glimpse into a world seldom seen by outsiders.
